Entrance Antiphon

Give peace, O Lord, to those who wait for You,
that Your prophets be found true.
Hear the prayers of Your servant,
and of Your people Israel.

First Reading (Exodus 32:7-11, 13-14)

A reading from the book of Exodus

The Lord spoke to Moses, 'Go down now, because your people whom you brought out of Egypt have apostatised. They have been quick to leave the way I marked out for them; they have made themselves a calf of molten metal and have worshipped it and offered it sacrifice. "Here is your God, Israel," they have cried "who brought you up from the land of Egypt!"'
The Lord said to Moses, 'I can see how headstrong these people are! Leave Me, now, My wrath shall blaze out against them and devour them; of you, however, I will make a great nation.'

But Moses pleaded with the Lord his God. 'Lord,' he said, 'why should Your wrath blaze out against this people of Yours whom You brought out of the land of Egypt with arm outstretched and mighty hand? Remember Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, Your servants to whom by Your own self You swore and made this promise: I will make your offspring as many as the stars of heaven, and all this land which I promised I will give to your descendants, and it shall be their heritage for ever.' So the Lord relented and did not bring on His people the disaster He had threatened.

The word of the Lord.
Thanks be to God.

Responsorial Psalm (Ps 50:3-4, 12-13, 17, 19)

R. I will rise and go to my father.

Have mercy on me, God, in Your kindness.
In Your compassion blot out my offence.
O wash me more and more from my guilt
and cleanse me from my sin.

R. I will rise and go to my father.

A pure heart create for me, O God,
put a steadfast spirit within me.
Do not cast me away from Your presence,
nor deprive me of Your holy spirit.
R. I will rise and go to my father.

O Lord, open my lips
and my mouth shall declare Your praise.
My sacrifice, a contrite spirit;
a humbled, contrite heart You will not spurn.
R. I will rise and go to my father.

Second Reading (1 Timothy 1:12-17)

A reading from the first letter of St Paul to Timothy

I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who has given me strength, and who judged me faithful enough to call me into His service even though I used to be a blasphemer and did all I could to injure and discredit the faith. Mercy, however, was shown me, because until I became a believer I had been acting in ignorance; and the grace of our Lord filled me with faith and with the love that is in Christ Jesus. Here is a saying that you can rely on and nobody should doubt: that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners. I myself am the greatest of them; and if mercy has been shown to me, it is because Jesus Christ meant to make me the greatest evidence of His inexhaustible patience for all the other people who would later have to trust in Him to come to eternal life. To the eternal King, the undying, invisible and only God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen.

The word of the Lord.
Thanks be to God.

Gospel Acclamation (2 Corinthians 5:19)

Alleluia, alleluia!

God was in Christ, to reconcile the world to Himself;
and the Good News of reconciliation He has entrusted to us.
Alleluia!

Gospel (Luke 15:1-10)

A reading from the holy Gospel according to Luke

The tax collectors and the sinners were all seeking the company of Jesus to hear what He had to say, and the Pharisees and the scribes complained. 'This man' they said 'welcomes sinners and eats with them.' So he spoke this parable to them: 'What man among you with a hundred sheep, losing one, would not leave the ninety-nine in the wilderness and go after the missing one till he found it? And when he found it, would he not joyfully take it on his shoulders and then, when he got home, call together his friends and neighbours? "Rejoice with me," he would say, "I have found my sheep that was lost." In the same way, I tell you, there will be more rejoicing in heaven over one repentant sinner than over ninety-nine virtuous men who have no need of repentance.

'Or again, what woman with ten drachmas would not, if she lost one, light a lamp and sweep out the house and search thoroughly till she found it? And then, when she had found it, call together her friends and neighbours? "Rejoice with me," she would say "I have found the drachma I lost." In the same way, I tell you, there is rejoicing among the angels of God over one repentant sinner.'

The Gospel of the Lord.
Praise to you, Lord Jesus Christ.

CONFIRMATIONS FOR 2022

Congratulations to our Confirmation candidates from St Brigid's and St Patrick's who received the grace of this sacrament over the past two weeks. I'm especially grateful to Bishop-emeritus Les Tomlinson who was able to come on each of the evenings and to meet with the students in the week leading up to the Confirmations. May these students continue to be strengthened in their commitment to live out the Christian life.

HUGE THANK YOU!

A massive vote of thanks to the small but ever-reliable band of faithful who assisted with the parish working bee at St Brigid's, Healesville, last Saturday. We managed to get a number of worthwhile jobs done, which has really helped clean up the place. The old adage that "a stitch in time saves nine" is especially true of maintenance. Regular maintenance is therefore also the best way to save money in the long run. With this in mind I'm hoping to have another working bee in November. Hopefully the warmer weather will bring out a few extra helping hands. Stay tuned!

Saint of the Week - St John Chrysostom

Name: John ‘Chrysostom’
– Doctor of the Church
Born: AD c.347-9;
Antioch
Died: 14th September AD
407; Comana, Pontus,
Asia Minor (Turkey)
Feast Day: 13th
September
Patron Saint of:
Educators; lecturers;
preachers, epilepsy

It’s a curious fact that many of the saints honoured by the Church suffered sustained reputational attacks during their life, even from those within the Church. The life of St John Chrysostom provides a good example of this subtle but painful cross which saw him calumniated and even exiled.

John was born in that most ancient of Christians cities, Antioch. His father, a commander of the Imperial troop was killed while John was still a boy. His mother ensured that John had the finest education she could afford, studying oratory and rhetoric under Libanius, who (though a pagan) was considered the finest orator of his time. At the age of twenty John was baptised while he was studying law. He abandoned a legal career to pursue a life of radical monastic asceticism living in a cave in the mountains until ill-health forced his return to the city. He was ordained deacon and later priest, whereupon his repute as a preacher and pastor grew. He was eventually made Archbishop of Constantinople, the Capital of the Eastern Empire and the second most important See after Rome.

Indeed, it was his preaching above all else that has won John his fame and the enduring epithet Chrysostom (“Golden-mouth” in Greek). His gift for oratory was such that not only Christians but even pagans flocked to hear him preach. His aim was not to tickle the ears of his audience by mere eloquence; it was the power and passion of his message that cut the hearts of his audience. His primary aim was the conversion and amendment of life of his audience. The austerity and moral integrity of his own life gave his preaching a credibility perhaps lacking in his more worldly confreres.

John was fearless in his condemnation of the public sinners, irrespective of their positions of prominence. He was scathing in his appraisal of the Emperor Julian’s immoral proclivities, as he was of the Empress Eudoxia whose conduct was no less a matter of public scandal. Nor did John spare his own brother bishops from public rebuke: the worldly, vain and ambitious Archbishop Theophilus of Alexandria became his arch-rival. On one occasion, thirty-six bishops plotted to have John removed from Constantinople, though their success was short-lived. John had the support of successive Popes, but this did not spare him from falling subject to political disfavour. The Emperor Arcadius saw John banished from Constantinople to the Armenian mountains and later summoned to a far-flung corner of the Black Sea. The arduous travel in the heat of summer left John weakened and he collapsed from sheer exhaustion. Thus, he died, exiled from his own diocese. He was promptly recognised as a saint and later honoured with the title “Doctor of the Church” at the Council of Chalcedon in 451 on account of his prodigious theological legacy.

Interestingly Pope John XXIII designated St John Chrysostom patron of the Second Vatican Council. Ironically, the standard of homiletics and preaching in many Catholic churches since the Council has fallen into decline. Perhaps the greatest obstacle to preaching today is the fear of speaking the truth, and the omnipresent danger of offending people. Wishy-washy or ambiguous preaching bores people, but it also keeps the preacher out of trouble, and that makes it an immense temptation, for bishops and priests alike. St John Chrysostom frequently found himself in very hot water because he wasn’t afraid to call sin by its proper name, especially if he saw the danger that it presented to the eternal salvation of an individual. In other words, the bell-like clarity of his words was motivated by genuine pastoral charity – to lead souls to the truth and salvation. Sadly, this earned him many powerful enemies and ultimately cost him his diocese and his life. We pray, that inspired by St John Chrysostom, the Church can recover many more ‘golden-mouthed’ pastors, and can overcome the present-day preference for foggy and ambivalent teaching that seeks to win people over by telling them what they want to hear, rather than the Gospel truths revealed by Christ. True shepherds like John Chrysostom remind us that when it comes to preaching there is no charity without clarity.

St John Chrysostom, pray for us!
